Hazardous Weather

Numerous severe thunderstorms are expected Wednesday across the region. Thunderstorms may diminish somewhat early in the day, but are expected to reintensify by mid afternoon. Damage straight-line winds, isolated tornadoes, and large hail are possible.

Hazardous Weather

The chance for thunderstorms will linger today as the weather system which caused the overnight/early morning unsettled weather makes one last push across North and Central Texas. If a storm manages to form east of a Bonham to Terrell to Hearne line this afternoon, it will have the potential to become strong to severe. The threats will be damaging winds, hail and perhaps an isolated tornado.

A variety of weather conditions will be possible today. This morning there will be a chance of showers and thunderstorms across primarily the Coastal Plains to the Victoria area. Any storms that occur may produce small hail and perhaps an isolated strong wind gust. The storm threat should end by mid to late morning with a very dry airmass and clearing skies then overspreading the region. This will result in high temps warming into the 90s across most inland areas today along with significantly less humid feeling conditions.
